MISS NEILSEN DELIGHTS WITH ENGLISH SONGS

With Gabriel Ysaie, Violinist, Soprano

Appears in Varied Programmes at the Columbia.

Those who were present at the Alice Nielsen-Gabriel Ysaie concert given at the Columbia Theater yesterday afternoon listened to a varied programme. It was a banquet at which the lofty select Brahms, Beethoven, Strauss, Grieg, Saint Saens, mingled with the humbler, more popular songs of Schubert, Schumann, Wolf, Loewe, Franz, and of the old song writers. Brahms and Strauss were represented by one number each, while the English variety, the chief of these were Brahms' "Lied," Grieg's "Solveig's Lied," and "Ein Traum."

The song programme opened with two songs of Gade, "When Cherries Bloomed" and "At the Feast of the Dead," the latter an Indian theme, both musically congruous with the poet's mood. Richard Strauss' beautiful "Serenade" was given in the English version. A group of French songs, Debussy's plaint "Mandoline," Saint Saens' "Toujours," Benberg's "A Tot," and "Tu Sois," by Caplet, followed, and to all these Miss Nielsen imparted the delicate subtle flavor of the French song.

Miss Nielsen's best work was done in "Will of the Wisp," the floating fancy, by Spross, "A Haunting Memory," by Carlisle Jacobsen, "Down in the Forest," by Ronald; Arensky's "But Late in Dance," Liszt's "Lorelei," and "Love Song." Gabriel Ysaie's skill was put to the test in Mendelssohn's "Ruslan and Alina" and his musicianship in Beethoven's D major violin sonata. It must be said that there is more promise for the future than for the present in the performance. The playing of the first movement of the Beethoven sonata was so unsatisfactory as to barely be redeemed by the admirable playing of the second movement, and by the vigor, fine perception of phrase values in the finale.

In the minds of many the question, "Has the mantle fallen upon the son's shoulders?" is a question that will be answered by the young virtuoso walked out upon the stage. He is still but a youth, though tall, well built and somewhat resembling his distinguished father, Eugene Ysaie.

In long sustained subdued pianissimo, such as the "Reve d'Enfant," a composition of Eugene Ysaie, his touch is not uniformly firm, and in the "Havaneise" and "Serenade" he has more vigor, but in the rapid passages, the chromatic work was good, but it was evident work, indeed, evidence of labor detracted from the full enjoyment of his performance throughout. The "Herzreise in Faure, played with taste, was very beautifully done.

AN INFORMATION BUREAU.

World Almanac a Vast Compendium of Useful Knowledge.

Packed within the 822 pages of the World Almanac and Encyclopedia for 1913 is a vast compendium of useful knowledge, remarkably inclusive in scope and at the same time generous as to detail. It is a printed information bureau which answers the thousands of questions raised every day in home, office, and even in the school, bearing on political, historical, scientific, legal, commercial, and other subjects. It is a tabular reference library condensed in one volume, yet so generously yielding information that it corresponds to a library comprising hundreds of volumes.

What is the question in your mind? The index gives you the subject and in less than a minute the page is open before you and the answer is there. What is the Hay-Pauncefote treaty? What were the benefactions in 1912? What have been the polar discoveries? What is the population of Detroit, Mich.? What are the causes of the crisis in the various States? Who are the chaplains in the United States Army and Navy? What is the income tax? What are the trusts in the United States? These are only a few of the great store of information in the book. Art, music, literature, drama, geographical research, electrical progress, sporting records, marine disasters, the Panama Canal act of 1912, and the new pension law of 1912—these but hint at the wide scope of subjects covered in the book's inclusive range.

Judge Stricken on Bench.

Resolution Adopted to Change Seats to Accommodate Members.

The House yesterday unanimously adopted a resolution authorizing the installation in the chamber, during the month of March, of benches to replace the present desks and seats.

Representative Fitzgerald, who presented the resolution, said the change is imperative, as there are now not enough seats in the House to accommodate the increased membership after March 4. It is estimated the cost of installing benches, similar to those in the English Parliament, will be $25,000 and members will determine during the extra session whether the benches ought to be made permanent. In urging immediate change of the seating arrangement in the House, Representative Fitzgerald said:

"The present membership is 286. After March 4 the membership will be 355. At best we can seat under the old desk arrangement but 400 members, and some system of benches is necessary. These benches will have to be installed in March before the extra session is called, and after the session now sitting expires."

PROBING PURCHASE.

Citizens of Pittsburgh Want Investigation of Post-Office Site Deal.

Sherman Allen, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, accompanied by a subcommittee of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds of the House, has gone to Pittsburgh to investigate complaints that are being made by citizens of Pittsburgh against the construction of the new post-office building on the site purchased by the government. The Treasury Department and Congress have had considerable difficulty handling the post-office building fight in Pittsburgh for several years past. The site now held by the government was purchased upon the approval of Leslie and Shaw just before he left the office of Secretary of the Treasury, the sum of $300,000 having been appropriated for it.

Some members of Congress have held that the sum was excessive, and real estate dealers in Pittsburgh have endeavored to have the sale annulled in order that they might offer sites at a far less sum. A delegation of Pittsburgh citizens recently visited Washington in an effort to have the matter reopened.

BENCHES FOR HOUSE.

The House yesterday unanimously adopted a resolution authorizing the installation in the chamber, during the month of March, of benches to replace the present desks and seats.

Representative Fitzgerald, who presented the resolution, said the change is imperative, as there are now not enough seats in the House to accommodate the increased membership after March 4. It is estimated the cost of installing benches, similar to those in the English Parliament, will be $25,000 and members will determine during the extra session whether the benches ought to be made permanent. ## AUTO DEALERS PLAN TO ATTEND BIG SHOWS

Committee Representing Washington Association to Confer with Factory Men.

A committee representing the Washington Automobile Dealers' Association will visit both Madison Square Garden and the Grand Central Palace Automobile Shows, which started in New York yesterday, in order to confer with the sales managers and factory representatives of the cars which are to be exhibited in the Washington Automobile Show, which opens in Convention Hall February 2 for a week.

This will insure the pick of the metropolitan exhibits for the local event, making it by far the most elaborate and representative ever held here. This committee consists of T. O. Freney, Charles W. Semmes, F. W. Roberts, Arthur Forsaker, I. J. Henderson, J. Harry Miller, J. H. Earle, W. D. Harrison, and Gordon Cowie, accompanied by a number of the exhibitors, have arranged for reservations and have perfected their itinerary so that they will leave next Thursday night for New York.

The awarding of the Washington Post Silver Loving Cup, which is to be presented to the best exhibit, has been placed in the hands of a committee composed of T. O. Freney, chairman; C. W. Semmes, and F. W. Roberts. It was decided by them to make the award on a basis of a popular vote, thereby insuring absolute fairness as well as making it an interesting feature to the visitors attending the show.

The souvenir programme as arranged is entirely in keeping with the high plane established with everything in the affair.
